Problems

We found

1. Many kids don't know about Chumash!
2. Their traditions and language are disappearing!
3. Some historical sites are damaged, and museums are closed some times.

experience Camp

Family camp in chumash Land.

Learning ancient Chumash cultures,
explore how the chumash lived,

and hunting, canoeing, fishing, and gathering into fun, safe activities! You can paddle a tomol, collect food, or try ancient tools.

The Chumash lived along the California coast. They were amazing sailors! They built a wooden canoe called Tomol to travel across the ocean.

Family Camp

Chumash Land — Parent-Child Experience Camp.

Leave behind the burdens of work and school, and return to the simplicity of early coastal living.

Aps: They lived in dome-shape tule houses called Aps. Here's our LEGO version- you can see the round top! They hunted, fished, gathered fruits, and lived peacefully with nature.

Behind the Dream: Making the History of the Early West Coast Indigenous Chumash Visible. The core of this project is to bring the history, culture, and way of life of the Chumash people—who originally lived along the central and southern coasts of California—into public awareness. The Chumash are among the earliest Indigenous peoples of the West Coast.

They possessed extensive knowledge of the ocean, crafted intricate tools and artworks such as shell jewelry and canoes, and maintained unique social structures and spiritual beliefs. Through art, exhibitions, and interactive experiences, we aim to help people understand how the Chumash lived in harmony with nature and appreciate their wisdom and contributions throughout history. This endeavor encourages greater respect for and preservation of Indigenous cultures.
